

Don't wolves see the difference between a wolf and a human?

Contributed by 6eDesign
Monday, 26 February 2007
Last Updated Friday, 18 May 2007

They do, but it's similar to a domestic dog. A domestic dog doesn't see you as a person; it sees the social position that you hold – the rank position. And it's the same with the wolves. As long as you can maintain your position within the pack and justify it then they are more than happy to accept you.

{moscomment}